Forbes Names Business Talent Group one of 100 “Most Promising” Companies

BTG's Three Consecutive Years of 60% Growth Fueled by Growing Market for On-Demand Independent Consultants and High Performance Project Based Business Solutions

January 25, 2015, New York, NY – Citing the business trends and strategies that are paying off for American companies with “the next billion-dollar ideas,” Forbes magazine named Business Talent Group (BTG) to its list of the 100 “Most Promising Companies” for 2015. BTG was co-founded by its CEO Jody Greenstone Miller and its President Amelia Warren Tyagi, and is one of only three female led companies named to the list. Forbes’ fourth annual ranking of the high-growth, privately held concerns with under $300 million in annual revenue appears in its February 9, 2015 issue which is on the stands now.

According to Forbes, BTG: “Generates project demands from private equity firms, nonprofits and major corporations, and pairs them with contractors from its talent pool of more than 3,800 people. Clients include Pfizer, PBS and SanDisk...With clients in 16 countries, Miller has her sights set on Asia, Europe and Latin America expansions.”

BTG co-founder and CEO Jody Greenstone Miller said, “BTG’s past three consecutive years of over 60% growth demonstrates the intense demand for smarter, faster business solutions that we’re able to meet through our network of 3,800+ high-caliber independent professionals. I salute Forbes for spotlighting the breakthrough ideas and trends that are shaping the future of work, and know that BTG will live up to the tremendous honor and full potential of being on Forbes’ Most Promising Companies list.”
